35 Leave Rumford Monday and Wednesday To Receive Military Training

Local Board No. 2 of the Selective Service, with headquarters at Rumford, made its heaviest call for draftees to date this week with a total of 35. Of this number six were from Bethel: A. Lincoln Merrill, Donald S. Brown, Harris E. Tyler, Stanley Carter, Gaston M. J. Latendresse, and George A. Parsons. The selectees left Rumford by train, and those passing the second physical examination at Portland continued on to Fort Devens.

It is reported that the total number of Maine men inducted by April 15 will be 2,541. All men go first to Fort Devens, where after a three days stay they are sent to their assigned outfits. The posts announced as receiving trainees from Devens are:

Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.; Camp Edwards, Mass.; Harbor Defenses at Portland, Me.; Boston, Narragansett Bay and Long Island Sound, Army Base, Boston; Fort Benning, Ga.; Camp Hulen Tex.; Mitchell Field, N. Y.; Westover Field, Mass.; Providence, R. I.; Fort Knox, Ky.; Fort Belvoir, Va.; Fort Bragg, N. C.; Edgewood Arsenal, Md.; Washington, D. C.; Godman Field, Ky. and Pope Field, N. C.

Those inducted from the Rumford Board to date are:

(Any draftee's number marked with a V is a volunteer. Draftee marked Vol. is a minor—youngeer than draft age—who volunteered with written consent of parents.)

Selective Service Director Says All Class I-A Men To Be Called First

Many requests are being received from Class I-B men concerning their status.

Paragraph 343 of the Regulations provides that Class I-B men are not to be inducted until such time as they are acceptable to the land and naval forces.

The Selective Training and Service Act of 1940 authorizes the training of not more than 900,000 men per annum. This maximum was further limited by the appropriation for the current fiscal year which limited the total number of trainees to 800,000.

It is the present intention not to call Class I-B men for induction so long as there is an adequate supply of Class I-A men. General James W. Hanson, Maine Director of Selective Service has announced.

VAN TELEPHONE LINES EXTENDED OVER 40 MILES THIS WINTER

Spreading into three towns with on improved service, the Van Telephone and Telegraph Co. has carried on an extensive program of expansion this winter. The first project started several months ago when the right of the Bethel and Newry company were acquired and work begun on lines to Sunday River, Bear River and into the town of Hanover. On the two lines there are 35 subscribers in a total distance of 30 miles. This number includes some who were formerly served by the Androscoggin Lakes line. Work on these lines is not completed, but they are in use.

Two lines have now been built to Gilead, one to the farm of A. R. Mason & Sons and the other to Gilead village. Ten subscribers are listed for the latter, which will be in use in a short time.

BAND'S WHIST PARTY

A "telephone whist" party was held Tuesday evening for the benefit of Bethel Band. Prize winners were: first, Herbert Rowe; second, Earl Davis. The following entertained: Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Taylor, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Percy Brinck and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dudley, Mrs. Ray York and Mrs. Robert Lord, Mrs. Earl Davis and Mrs. Laurence Lord, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Young, Mr. and Mrs. Omer Drummond, Mrs. Grover Brooks, and Mrs. Emma Van Den Kerckhoven.

CORRECTION

Pelchat to Serve 4-6 Years for Assault, Robbery

Two Divorces Granted As March Superior Court Adjourned Last Friday

Lorenzo Pelchat of Berlin was sentenced last Friday to serve four to six years in prison. He was charged with assaulting and robbing Harold Fuller of Upton, the charge of kidnapping being placed on file. The offense occurred on Monday night, March 3. On the next Friday indictments were returned by the grand jury of the Superior Court in session at Rumford charging Pelchat and Adrien Russell of Boston with kidnapping, assault and robbery. Pelchat surrendered and confessed at the Berlin police station the next night.

At the close of Superior Court Friday two divorces were granted: Walter J. Irvine from Mabel A. Irvine, cruel and abusive treatment and Amy J. Farris from Guy Everett Ferris, utter desertion. Other decrees will be issued as soon as the necessary affidavits regarding military or naval service are filed.

MISS SUSIE B. TWITCHELL

Miss Susie Barker Twitchell died at her home in Mayville last Thursday night. She was born in Bethel Nov. 17, 1861, the daughter of Samuel Barker and Malvina Chapman Twitchell, and has been a lifelong resident of the town.

She was educated at Gould Academy and afterward taught in the town schools and Gould Academy, also in New York State and New Hampshire, coming home at the death of her mother more than 50 years ago.

With confident trust in the love and guidance of her Heavenly Father, she met the vicissitudes of life with undaunted courage, bearing herself with gallant cheerfulness, not only in sunshine, but when the clouds were heavy and the way was dark, entering into rest, March 13.

She is survived by two sisters, Miss Florence Twitchell of Bethel and Mrs. Marion Hobbs of Worcester, Mass.

Services were held Sunday afternoon at Greenleaf's funeral home, Rev. M. A. Gordon officiating. Interment was at Riverside cemetery.

MANUAL TRAINING EXHIBIT THURSDAY, MARCH 27

On Thursday afternoon from 2 to 5:30 the students of the Gould Academy Manual Training Department will hold their annual Exhibit of projects completed in the shop.

The Exhibit promises to be one of the most interesting in many years. Parents and friends are urged to come and pay the shop a visit. Also there will be demonstrations in the Science Department which should prove interesting. The entire school will be open for inspection.

Economic Highlights

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

Weeks ago opponents of the lease-lend bill admitted that their cause was lost. From the beginning, it was a certainty that the bill would go through. And so when an irritable, debate-weary Senate finally voted on the bill on the evening of March 8, it came almost as an anti-climax. There was no filibuster. There was no excitement. Congress simply gave its formal approval to a fateful, far-reaching policy which had been established and decided in all its basic essentials long ago.

The bill passed with comparatively little change. It gives the President powers which can be compared only to those conferred on Wilson during the World War. He is, in short, empowered to sell, transfer title to, lease, lend or otherwise dispose of any and all war materials to any powers whose defense he considers vital to the defense of the United States. The Senate added three more or less important amendments all of them approved by the White House. One ends the authority of the President to enter into contracts, on June 30, 1942, and stipulates that all contracts must be fulfilled by July 1, 1946. Another limits orders for war materials to amounts which will later be authorized by Congress, and adds a stipulation that not more than $1,300,000,000 worth of war supplies now possessed by our Army and Navy can be transferred. The third requires the President to report to Congress on the progress of the program each 90 days.

Two much-publicized proposed amendments were beaten. One would have forbidden the President to allow the U. S. Navy to convoy supply ships abroad. As White House spokesmen pointed out, this meant little or nothing, inasmuch as the Constitution gives the President, as Commander-in-Chief of all the military forces, almost unlimited authority over naval actions and policy, and it would take a Constitutional amendment to change that. The other amendment would have forbidden sending an A. E. F. to foreign lands without explicit Congressional approval. Administration leaders said that this would weaken our foreign policy, particularly in the Far East, by assuring our possible enemies that we would be unable to back up our talk with action. Congress concurred.

The vote did not divide up strictly on party lines. The Democrats held their forces well in line—40 voted for the bill and but 13 against. The Republicans split. Seventeen said no. Ten voted yes—including the party's Senate leader, McNary of Oregon.

It has been widely reported that Mr. Roosevelt was just waiting for Congress to finish wrangling before taking drastic steps to iron out arms production difficulties. It is one thing to pass a law providing all-aid to England. It is a very different thing to produce and ship the arms the belligerents so desperately need. The defense high command has already been shaken up, but there is still considerable division of responsibility. No one man has been given supreme command, as was Bernard Baruch in the 1917 War Industries Board. The feeling persists that the President will be forced to do this before long. And reports are also going around that some of the men high in defense councils have not proven to be such production wizards as their build-ups indicated.

In the meantime, it is next to impossible to find out exactly how well or badly the defense drive is going. Some say it is in fearfully bad shape; others say that it is progressing as well as can be expected. What may prove to have been an important declaration was lately made by ex-Ambassador Bullitt in a speech before the Overseas Press Club. Mr. Bullitt said that "we could handle our planned output of airplanes and tanks and merchant ships and guns in 1942 if we would buckle to the task now." He indicated that a declaration of "full emergency" may be necessary to awaken and prod the country. And Mr. Bullitt has often reflected the Presidential direction of thinking in the past.

It is true, however, that the physical effects of the arms drive can be seen in great quantity now. Manufacturing towns are mushrooming. Shipyards are springing up. Close to 150,000 drafted men are under arms and training. Airplane production is undoubtedly rising. In other words, progress is being made—but many an expert thinks it is far slower than the nation has a right to expect.

It was the ever-eloquent Winston Churchill who, months back, spoke of the new ties which are binding England and the United States together, and in magnificent phrases, likened this to the Mississippi River saying, let it roll, in full flood of the new ties which are binding that too is the hope of Washington for the world of the future.

The peace of such a world would be guaranteed by two great powers—the United Kingdom and the United States. They will have the navies and the gigantic air forces. They will guarantee the liberties of little nations. They will work together for a higher standard of living for all. It is a splendid dream. But, until and unless all that the Hitler theory of government represents is destroyed, it can be only a dream.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

CHILDREN IN THE TUB

The bathtub is an excellent spot for delicate, high-key snapshots of children—and these shots are easy with high speed film and photo bulbs.

ONE of the most popular spots in the house, for snapshots of small children, is the bathtub. It's a natural location, not only because children are particularly appealing during the daily scrub, but also because the white wall and white tub lend a bright, high-key quality to the pictures.

The walls and tub serve both as background and as a series of reflectors, completely encircling the subject. Because of all these bright reflections, the shadows are very soft and clear—exactly the effect you want in a child picture. This effect can be obtained in other shots if you use several reflectors of white cloth or cardboard, to distribute the light—and it's a point well worth remembering. Most indoor snapshots could be improved 100 percent by the use of reflectors.

When you take snapshots in the bathroom, keep your photo lights fairly high, so that the light can get down into the tub. If the bathroom is rather small, one light can often be placed in a ceiling fixture, and the other used in a bridge lamp and moved about as required. For box camera snapshots, on high speed film, use two No. 2 flood bulbs. Put one in a ceiling fixture and the other in a bridge lamp 4 feet from the subject. Or, if you prefer to use two bridge lamps with reflectors, you can keep them both 4 feet from the subject and have a No. 1 bulb in the second lamp. I prefer the No. 2 bulbs because they give twice as much light and last about three times as long.

In most bathtub snapshots, the tub should be just about as bright as the subject. If you need it a bit darker (for example, when the young subject is having a shampoo and you want the white lather to show) just bring your subject to the near edge of the tub, and tilt the reflectors down a trifle. This shades the background just enough—be careful not to darken it too much.

Follow these suggestions next time you shoot some tub pictures of the "youngest member." You'll find they help make these snapshots even more attractive.

Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—If you want to start a heated argument among the members of that Washington institution which is often called "the third house of congress," but whose official name is the National Press club, just mention "government censorship."

Those are fighting words to the men of press and radio and—well, did you ever try to put a muzzle on a real healthy airedale?

Just to keep the fun going, I dropped in the other day to have a chat with the man whose name has been more closely associated with censorship of late than any other in the capital—and how he hates it!

He is soft-spoken, gray-haired Lowell Mellett, a keen-minded, middle-aged newspaper acquaintance of mine over many years and one of the best-liked and most highly respected of all those who have now deserted the fourth estate to work for the New Deal.

Mellett left the Washington Daily News to become head of the National Emergency council in 1938. (The "emergency" in this sense refers to the 1933 variety and not the "limited" one we are enjoying at present.) The NEC, as the council appeared in the New Deal "alphabet" in those days, has since become the office of Government Reports, a less pretentious institution. Mr. Mellett is its head and is also one of the President's administrative assistants. These latter are the men who, according to official pronouncement, must have a "passion for anonymity." The functions of these assistants differ widely as does the degree of their intimacy with the President, but of all his advisers, Lowell Mellett is one of those in whom the President places his deepest confidence.

There is a reason why this former newspaper man's name has been associated with a possible censorship of news. When the President asked congress recently for funds to make the office on government reports permanent, the house of representatives committee on appropriations called Mellett before it to ask him, among other things, what, if any, plans the administration has for curtailing or regulating what should and should not be printed about defense or other matters, according to the government's way of thinking. Mellett told the congressmen that the administration has no such plan at all.

The word "plan" is used in the concrete sense for it is well known that several specific programs for regulating what would or would not be permitted to be made public by press and radio have been drawn up by various officials, who would like to be a muzzle on the news bands in case of war or even in case a full emergency is officially proclaimed, or perhaps even before.

Mellett's answer satisfied the committee and the lower house agreed to the measure.

Nevertheless, the rumor lingers on that a man with scissors is lurking behind the White House hedge ready to clip the reporters' wings the moment they spread them too widely.

sentiments on censorship, sentiments which I believe it is safe to say are those of the President, too, at this writing. This is the way Mr. Mellett expresses himself on the subject:

"Even in case of war I don't believe in a propaganda drive," he said to me, referring to any artificial effort to mold public opinion in favor of government policy. "I have constantly opposed a central press bureau when I have heard it discussed, because it is impractical. It is impossible to get the news of government through one bottleneck."

"My idea," he went on, "is simply to see to it that the press information bureau of the army and the navy and possibly the defense agencies, which now exist, are made as efficient as possible."

To the newsman, this means that these bureaus would have at their fingertips information which the press ordinarily obtains from individual officials. In an emergency, war and navy chiefs feel these individuals might inadvertently reveal information which should be kept confidential.

"If this method doesn't work," Mr. Mellett declared, "my idea would be to have representatives of the press and radio come here to Washington and offer their own plan for handling emergency news. They wouldn't offer a plan which the government could refuse. They want the news and the government wants to get it out."

He explained that what he meant was that he believed the newsmen would agree on what was sheer good sense and patriotism to print.

Finally, I reminded Mr. Mellett that in the last war there was criticism of the Creel committee on public information because it not only withheld much news that the public had a right to have, but also it gave out information that was pure propaganda. Therefore, I asked, wasn't it natural to expect that any restriction on government news might be looked upon with suspicion by the press, radio and public?

Mr. Mellett came back to his original thesis. He reiterated that he did not believe in a propaganda drive—such a drive as the Creel committee indulged in. Secondly, he said, if the information bureaus of the various government agencies were efficient, the facts would be available. It was because the Creel committee was a central news bureau (which he opposes) that it became a bottleneck, holding back facts that could have been made available to the press and radio even in war time.

Statue Troubles In Nation's Capitol

It is easier to revise a statute in Washington than to move a statue. That is why Sixteenth street, the avenue that runs almost up to the front door of the White House, is torn up these days. The excavating is taking place at Scott circle.

Washington is full of circles, most of them with their historic statues. They make for beauty and also traffic jams. Recently certain newcomers to the city suggested removing the statues instead of building million dollar underpasses such as the one now being constructed under the proud figure of General Winfield Scott. But these newcomers just didn't know Washington tradition.

One man who tried to break that tradition got into a terrific mess. It was John Russell Young, then a newspaper reporter, now District Commissioner Young, one of the three "mayors" of the city. It was in Harding's administration when public buildings and grounds were in charge of the engineer aide to the President, Colonel Sherill.

Mr. Young conceived the idea that the statue of George Washington, located in a somewhat shabby neighborhood several blocks from the White House, ought to be in front of it where General Jackson sits astride his famous rearing charger in Lafayette park. He persuaded Colonel Sherill to switch the two figures and proceeded to write a story of what was to happen.

Then came the deluge. President Harding was almost drowned in an avalanche of angry telegrams from ardent Jacksonians all over the country. The state of Tennessee not only legislated its fury over this insult to its famous son but announced it was sending a delegation to the President.

Only a speedy denial of his intention to force General Jackson to trade places with General Washington saved Mr. Harding's scalp.

No, we don't disturb our sculptured great in Washington. If we can't get around them we go under them.

TIPS to Gardeners

NEW SWEET PEAS

A NEW, more vigorous, longer-blooming, heat-resistant sweet pea family has been introduced to the gardening world. It is the spring flowering sweet pea.

Because of their newness, spring flowering sweet peas are as yet available in only seven colors. Three All-American prize-winners were introduced last year: Rose pink, blue, and lavender. The new ones this year are white, clear pink, light lavender, and mauve.

The new sweet peas are grown just like other types now in general use. They may be planted outdoors as soon as the soil can be worked. For best results the soil should be spaded to a depth of 18 inches, and the lower 12 inches mixed with fertilizer, preferably well-rotted manure. The trench should then be filled with the soil-fertilizer mixture to within six inches of the top, and the seed planted one inch deep in this shallow trench.

After vines are well established they should be watered thoroughly once every five to seven days, and the flowers picked regularly.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys may become sluggish in their work—do not act on time—may fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, nervousness, dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorders are a constant burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nationwide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

A Non-Partisan Editorial Review of the Events of Each Week, Illustrated

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst, and not necessarily of this newspaper.

LEASE-LEND Finally

The passage of the lease-lend bill, called many names by its opponents, including the lend-spend bill and the lend-give bill, suddenly was passed by the U. S. senate by 60-31. The action seemed sudden after the long and vituperative debate which found Democrats leading the opposition and many Republicans finally in the favoring fold.

As the vote neared on the final day, almost exactly two months to a day from the time when it was jointly introduced in both houses, leading opponent Wheeler (Mont.) declared angrily:

"I have been told by New Dealers who get their information direct from the feed-trough that the United States will be at war by April 1."

Within the hour, however, the bill had passed, and the same Senator Wheeler grinningly was posing for pictures amicably patting the joined hands of Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky and George of Georgia, the bill's leading proponents.

Many amendments were added in the senate, but those which were passed did not arouse as much comment as those which went down to defeat.

Chief among these were three, the Ellender amendment which would have kept the President's hands tied on the movement of U. S. troops, the anti-convoys measure, and the Taft substitute for the entire bill, which would have made two billions available immediately for Britain, but which would have nullified most of the general intent of the British aid measure as originally framed.

The seven amendments added in the house, which limit the size of the aid to $1,300,000,000 without further authorization by congress, and which limit the life of contractual obligations, and which make it mandatory for the President to advise congress of steps taken, and which make it possible for congress to terminate the arrangement under certain circumstances, seemed generally acceptable to the senate, at least to the majority of senators, and materially shortened the fight against it in the upper house.

The solid Democratic South was strongly in favor of the bill and chief opposition generally was more marked from the Middle and Far West. The eastern senators were generally in favor, and of the 10 Republicans who voted "Aye," six were from New England and New Jersey, while only Alben of Vermont, Danaher of Connecticut and Tobey of New Hampshire made the three out of seventeen Republicans who voted "Nay." Of the thirteen Democrats who voted against the bill, only one, Reynolds (N. C.) was from the South, and only one, Walsh (Mass.) was from the East.

The issue was clear-cut, the opposition saying in effect two things:

(a) the measure was frankly a war measure;

(b) it would give the President dictatorial powers.

The proponents took two positions:

(a) the bill was our best protection against active entry into the war because it would aid Britain in holding the Nazi menace away from our shores;

(b) amendments adopted in both houses provided sufficient safeguards against dictatorial powers, and strong single and central power in the President's hands was needed in order to make the aid swift, certain and considerable.

What Next?

Aside from Senator Wheeler's daring prediction of "War by April 1," Washington observers began to ask themselves what would be the natural aftermath of the passage of the bill.

Maryland's Tydings (Dem.) who voted for the bill, nevertheless pleaded for a more frank and honest debate, declaring that it was no use for anyone to pull the wool over his eyes and say that England would not need our soldiers and our navy.

Others, while not so bold in their statements as Wheeler, felt certain that the bill would bring about a drastic change in our relationships with the Axis powers, especially Germany and Japan, and with the nation already on the verge of an open break with Italy, this seemed inclusive enough.

The bill frankly created one huge arsenal out of this country, and it was anticipated that the first act of our government would be to begin the transfer of huge stocks of war material already on hand across the Atlantic to England.

Much of it, too, could be expected to be transferred to Mediterranean ports, where many of the American-built airplanes are now in service.

Another step certain to be taken, it was said, would be the awarding of certain proportions of American defense contracts now being executed to Britain, and making arrangements for delivery. Some more American freighters, it was felt, would be given to Britain, and probably some more destroyers, of which Wilkie stressed the British need.

SPRING: Offensive

The Nazi spring offensive was gaining momentum, and the chief early activity was in the Balkans where, on the face of reports, if they could be believed, Germany was making a determined bid to pull Italy's Albanian chestnuts out of the Greek fire.

The reports of activity were volatile and confusing, as might be expected from activities that were at least 50 per cent diplomatic and the other 50 per cent actual motion of troops and materials.

First step was the German infiltration into Rumania, with its terrific and chaotic aftermath; then came the "multi-invasion" of Bulgaria, closely followed by an actual taking over of that country and the massing of troops and munitions in force on the Greek-Bulgarian frontier.

The number of these troops was variously estimated, the highest figure being about 600,000.

The throwing of 600,000 men of German blitz caliber against Greece, most military men agreed, would be fatal to the Hellenes if they had at the same time to continue to defend against a counter-attack of Italians bolstered by Nazi officers in Albania.

That is, it would be fatal unless Greece had substantial help. This, on the other hand, if reports again could be believed, England was about to send. On the face of things, Britain had already given Greece considerable and substantial aid in the Albanian battle, had vigorously engaged and whipped the Italians in Africa, and was strong in her promises to aid Greece on the northern front when, as and if the German attack materialized.

This aid was going to come, it seemed obvious that it would have to involve Turkey, which would have to get in the war on the side of England and Greece.

Visits by Eden and General Sir John Dill were followed by their moving over to Athens; the landing of British troops at Salonika, reputedly a full motorized division, and the formal request, a few days later, by the Greek authorities, for a formal assurance by Turkey that her treaty commitments would be met.

At this point it seemed fairly certain that Turkey would "come through," but Hitler was making a determined bid in the opposite direction, and the fact that the German troops did not immediately attack seemed proof enough that Hitler still had some hope that he could swing Turkey either to his side or to an onlooker's position.

The stand of Russia at the moment was dubious enough, but most observers believed she would act in the same manner she did in the case of the invasion of Poland, namely, hold off until German success was sure.

TIT FOR TAT: Italy-U. S.

Washington was mildly inflamed, if such a term can be used, when Mussolini, without any diplomatic interchange, ordered U. S. consulates at Naples and Palermo closed.

Also all of the American embassy and consular officials in Italy were ordered practically to be "confined to quarters"—that is, their diplomatic rights to move about the country were denied, and they were given categorical orders to stay within the areas to which they were assigned.

Cordell Hull acted promptly in reprisal. The Italian consulates at Detroit and Newark were ordered closed and Mr. Hull added to these actions the same type of restrictive order regarding the movements of Italian diplomatic officers and members of the consular service here.

Mostly Americans were amused by this interchange, particularly in the comparison of Detroit and Newark with Naples and Palermo.

However, Mr. Hull's orders carried with them one additional item which carried a somewhat sinister note, and that was that he especially restricted the Italian military and naval attaches.

NIGHT CLUB:

And Death

There were many who believed that Hitler was merely putting on a sideshow in the Balkans, attempting to lure England away from Africa and the Suez, thus permitting two things—a drastic attack on the canal and Gibraltar at the same time; and, second, a strong invasion attempt on the British Isles with England's head turned the other way.

That this might be so was seen in the fact that the Nazi Luftwaffe launched almost its bitterest air night attack on London that the war has seen.

Many civilians walking along a road were killed and wounded; a direct hit was scored on a night club with many casualties; and two bombs hit streets on each side of a cafe, collapsing the building and burying many who were dining there after dark.

Cables carried pathetic stories of the night-club bombing, telling how the bomb landed in the midst of the band-stand, killing the band-leader and many of his musicians; scattering death and desperate injury among a gay group of dancing men and women, the latter expensively gown.

Though with customary British censorship the location or name of the club was not cabled, it must from the description have been an exclusive recreation spot for the well-to-do, showing that the East-Enders have not been the only sufferers from the air blitz.

ODDITIES . . . in the news

WASHINGTON.—New Federal regulations have been issued that hot-dog sausages must have listed on their outside what is inside, in the order of predominance.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—George Schulz had tried everything for his nervous breakdown. He finally caged 100 canaries in a room and sat there with them. He reports their singing and chattering soothed his nerves.

CLEVELAND.—Somebody broadcast the fact that oxygen inhalators would cure headaches occurring during hangovers. Fire Chief Otto Roman was besieged with calls. He announced within a week that investigation had shown the inhalators to be a sure cure for hangover headaches, but said he was sorry, the hangover department was to be closed down.

BARCELONA.—A hitch-hiking farmer got a ride from a truck which was carrying an empty coffin. He got inside. Two other farmers were picked up and rode sitting alongside the coffin, unaware a third passenger was within. Suddenly the lid was raised and the farmer said: "Why, it's stopped raining." The two other passengers leaped in terror. One was instantly killed.

PARIS.—The famous Grevin museum of waxworks has melted down Daladier, Blum, Herriot and other pre-war leaders and will remold them into likenesses of Darlan, Laval and Petain.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—Firestone Patriarch Johanna is the champion Holstein cow. If the bottles of milk she has yielded in one year were put side by side, they would make a row 2,700 feet long. Scientists call it 2,700 "bottle feet" of milk, a new measure.

FRANKFORT, KY.—The Employment commission in Kentucky has ruled as to the status of two important members of the working classes. A pin-boy in a bowling alley is an employee. But a caddy is his own boss—he being listed as a contractor, and hence exempt from the wage and hour law minimums.

SPARTANBURG, S. C.—A visitor to Tennessee reported on his return a new kind of parking ticket for visitors. He started his motor and there was a loud bang. Lifting the hood, he saw that a harmless bomb had gone off, and there was a note. It reminded him he had parked one hour and 20 minutes overtime, and closed: "The next time it might be dynamite. Come again."

WORSE THAN WAR

An editorial by Frank Groves in
The Golden, Ill., New Era.

I happened to be the publisher of the Journal at Camp Point during the old World War, that is during that part of the war in which the United States participated, the years of 1917 and 1918. I remember especially the draft and how we thought to draw one of those unlucky numbers calling a young man to service was just a sentence of death. All these grim preparations we noted with awe and apprehension. The sequel was not as bad as anticipated. Most of the boys came back home, safe and sound, and in excellent condition.

To tell the truth, I am absolutely sure that not even one young soldier from the village of Camp Point was killed in battle. One, Mike Johnson, hailing from that village, met his death as the result of an accident. He was trying to saw open a hand grenade with a hack saw. Of course, few World war veterans would care to repeat their army experiences; but the idea that all who are forced into the army are going to be killed or wounded should be abandoned. The dangers of army life are but little greater than those of civil life.
Statisticians say the auto is killing them faster than are implements of battle.

The traffic slaughter is terrible and unnecessary. No great cause is served by those who dash their brains out against stone bulwarks in an effort to beat time. Think of the loss of it, the agony of it, the waste of it and the folly of it! Drive slowly and view the scenery. Drive swiftly and wind up in the cemetery.

All but one of the Camp Point boys returned home safe from the war, but all those who went out auto riding were not so fortunate.
I saw the McAllister family laid out at Camp Point, mother and four children, killed in a crossing accident. I attended the Hoke-Beckett funeral of five victims, following an accident in which two families and three generations were wiped out in an automobile collision. This week we sadly record the tragedy which cost the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Ormer and their daughter, Mrs. Warren Pearce. And in so doing, let it be said truthfully that the American people will continue to pay the penalty.

My grandpa notes the World's worn togs

And says we're going to the dogs
His grandpa in his house of logs
Said things were going to the
dogs

His grandpa in the Flemish bog
Said things were going to the
dogs

His grandpa in his hairy togs
Said things were going to the
dogs;

But this is what I wish to state,
The dogs have had an awful wait.

COMES THE SPRING FRESHET

GOULD ACADEMY

Seniors Leading Interclass Tourney

The Seniors gained a firm grip
on first place in the Interclass Tourney when they defeated the Juniors last Tuesday in a sensational game, 41-40. It was one of the best and most exciting games ever played in an Interclass Tourney here at Gould. Wilbur Bull was outstanding, scoring 21 points for the winners. Crockett and Baker scored 10 each. St. Thomas led the scoring for the Juniors with 12 points. Bull made good one free throw out of three attempts while the Juniors failed to score from the free throw line in six tries.
This one free throw spelled defeat
for the underclassmen.

The tournament in its early stages saw a sensational Sophomore team sweep through all opposition to lead without a defeat.
But their collapse was as sudden as their scintillating start, as they lost the first two games of the second round.

The Juniors got off to a poor start, losing to the Sophomores 31-28 and then to the Seniors by the same score. Since then they have played good ball and continued only to drop that tough 41-40 game on Tuesday.

The Seniors now have only two games to play, both with the Freshmen and as the Freshmen have yet to win a game it looks like the Championship is pretty well sewed up.

The standing March 18. Seniors won 3, lost 1; Sophomores won 4, lost 2; Juniors won 3, lost 3; Freshmen won 0, lost 4.

The Senior Girls of the boarding department are planning a Tea at the Principal's home Friday afternoon, under the supervision of Mrs.
Ireland, for the rest of the Senior Girls. In connection with this Tea, there will be a Musical presented by some of the girls of the Academy under the direction of Miss Ann Griggs.

One of the purposes of this get-together is the resurrection of the Twentieth Century Club, an organization of Seniors exhibited many years ago by Mrs. Marian True Gehring.

It is also planned to have a special meeting for the Senior Boys, at which time some outstanding man who commands the respect of the boys will be the special guest.
This meeting will be held in the reception room of Holden Hall on some date in the future.

Several male members of the faculty attended the meeting of the Oxford County Men's Club at South
Paris Wednesday night. This club is made up of men teachers of the schools of Oxford County.

A Physical Education Demonstration will be presented by the girls

Old Uncle Ezry had been very much occupied all by himself over in a corner near the fireplace. He was working industriously with a stub of pencil and a piece of paper. Suddenly he looked up happily.

"Doggone," he exclaimed, "if I ain't learned to write!"

Maw got up and looked over the scrawled lines across the paper.

"What do it say?" she asked.

"I don't know," replied Uncle Ezry, puzzled, "I ain't learned to read yet."

LTD

"I believe in saying it with flowers."

"Yes, but you only sent me one rose."

"Well, you know I never talk much."

"I shall die," thrabbled the suitor,
"unless you consent to marry me."

"I am sorry," said the maiden firmly, but firmly, "but I will not marry you."

So the fellow went out west and after 62 years, 3 months, and a day became suddenly ill and died. Grit

9 Million Winter "Woolies"

"Johnnie, you go right back up stairs and put on your nice warm union suit. The idea of going out on such a day with nothing more on than you wear in the summer!"

"But Mom, I'm not cold. I'm warm! I don't need anything more on. None of the fellows wear long underwear any more!"

Remember those clothing fights that went on all over the United States a few years ago with Johnnie and Susie protesting and Mother and Father insisting on underwear that would really keep them warm?

Little by little the younger generation, aided and abetted by an ever-increasing number of furnaces in homes and schools, and more closed and heated cars, won. Girls and boys alike discarded the beautifully knitted winter "woolies" of modern times as their forefathers had discarded red flannels. One after another of the factories that used to make winter underwear went out of business or turned to some other kind of work, as sales fell from a place where winter garments represented 60% of all underwear sales in 1926 to the place where they represented only 26% in 1939.

Then came 1940 and thousands of boys who had never known the cozy feeling of getting into a garment that comes snugly down to wrist and ankle or who had discarded it long ago, went to live in barracks at one of the many army camps throughout the United States. And almost over night they changed their minds about what they were willing to wear! They were delighted to climb into the winter underwear that Uncle Sam furnishes all soldiers in winter climates.

But where was Uncle Sam to get the 9 million garments he needed, with only a few factories equipped and trained to turn out this sort of thing? The story of the production of this unprecedented supply of "woolies" is typical of the adaptability industry is showing these days when typewriter companies are making machine guns, lawn mower factories are making fuses and even cosmetic case manufacturers are aiding in defense by turning out shell cases.

Five of the knitting mills whose regular business is the making of heavy winter underwear, opened their doors to other mills with defense contracts and taught them how to make the underwear needed by the government! It's willing cooperation of this sort that makes America's private enterprise system able to meet the unusual demands of a crisis like this effectively.

GEORGE A. MUNDT UNIT

The Auxiliary met at the home of Mary Moore for their regular meeting March 13. Mabel O'Brien was appointed chairman for the Chamber of Commerce supper to be held April 1.

Questionnaires for the Auxiliary have been filled out by the members for the National Defense Program.

The Second District Council meeting will be held at Lisbon Falls March 22 at 2 p. m.

Refreshments were served by the hostess following the meeting. There were 11 members present.

The next meeting will be held Mar. 28 at Mildred Scarborough's.

The Auxiliary gave a Birthday Party to the George A. Mundt Post Friday evening, March 14, in honor of their 22nd birthday. This event is celebrated each year by every Post in the Nation.

The supper was served at 6:30 to the 75 guests. Mrs. Marjorie McAlister was chairman, assisted by Selma Chapman, Alta Meserve, Lola Forbes, Mabel O'Brien, Frances Bennett and Jane Van Den Kerkhoven.

The honorary guests were seated at the head table, where a huge birthday cake, baked and donated by Lesta Compass, served as a centerpiece. This cake was presented to Commander Compass, on behalf of the Auxiliary, by our President, Alta Meserve.

Mildred Scarborough was in charge of the evening's program which consisted of the following selections:

Plano solo, Francis Bean
History of Legion, Pearl Tibbitts
Band Selection, Bruce, Hugh and Myron Scarborough and Francis Bean

Remarks were heard from the honorary guests, including the following: Frank Bean of the Jackson-Silver Post, Bryant Pond; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Maxim of South Paris; State Vice-President Fannie Cummings and County Commander Alanson Cummings of West Paris. God Bless America was sung by all in closing the program.

The Legion held a meeting where talks from Walter Gunther, Vice Commander of the Second District, of Lisbon Falls, and Commander Hinds of Livermore Falls, were heard. Mrs. Gunther and Mrs. Hinds were also guests of the Auxiliary.

Much credit is due the supper committee and Mrs. Scarborough in making this event a successful one.

NAPOLEON OUELLETTE UNIT

Napoleon Ouellette Unit and Post observed the American Legion's twenty-second birthday March 16 with over 100 present. Eighty members and guests were seated at a 6:30 supper. The tables were decorated with blue and gold crepe paper and cut flowers.

A large class of members of the American Legion and Unit and members of the V. F. W. Unit met March 17 at Stephens High School for instruction in First Aid work under the direction of Ted Davis, assisted by Arline Skofield. This class will meet Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 7 to 10 p. m.

The questionnaires are here and all Unit members are requested to fill out the 45 questions relating special skills which might be useful in emergency service such as "Have you passed a course in first aid?" Other questions relate to canteen work, social service, feeding and clothing of the homeless, sewing, knitting, and teaching.

Dorchester, Mass., were guests of his father, Perley Raimy, a few days recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Alden Wilson and children were in Portland Sunday.

A NEW DRESSMAKER PRINT as worn in Hollywood by Rochelle Hudson Glamorous Screen Star

Novelty prints are gaining in popularity as each season follows another. Unique designs, such as advertising trademarks, symbols, birds and beasts have all contributed to fabric printers' art. This week's frock is made of an intriguing bird print patterned after the crane. It is a coat-dress opening all the way down the front, with a wealth of stitching on the belt, pocket flaps, collar, and at the ends of each sleeve. The style feature is the smart pleating which has its source in the tucks stitched through the waist and run clear to the hem. Color plays an important part in this week's style pre-eminence. The one worn by Miss Hudson is the new but-tercotech tan. It also makes up well in sky blue or Vermouth.

A Bit Mixed

Cross marriages between two families produce some queer mix-ups, but the situation created by an American takes some beating. He married the daughter of his own daughter's husband by another wife, thus making him the son-in-law of his son-in-law. His daughter, therefore, became his stepmother-in-law and his bride her own stepmother. His wife has just given birth to a daughter. She is her step-grandmother's sister, her own mother's step-aunt, and her father's step-sister-in-law. Phew!

Concrete Cellar Floor.

QUESTION: I wish to lay a reinforced concrete floor in my cellar, and a wooden floor on top. Would you advise a three or four inch layer of concrete? Would a mixture of 1 part cement, 2 parts of small stones or ashes keep the moisture from coming through the floor, provided I put down a thin layer of tar over the concrete?

Answer: A word of warning: Never use ashes as a base for concrete or as mix with concrete; use clean building sand. Four inches or more of concrete should be laid for a basement floor. The following mix is advisable: 1 part Portland cement, 2 1/4 parts of clean building sand and 3 parts gravel or crushed stone of 1 inch maximum size. Complete printed instructions on the laying of concrete floors can be secured from the Portland Cement Association at 347 Madison Ave., New York city. (Chicago office at 33 West Grand avenue.) After the concrete has dried thoroughly, and before laying the wood floor, coat the cement with liquid tar or asphalt; then put down a layer of heavy asphalt saturated felt, overlapping the sheets at least half the width. The wood floor is then laid on an asphalt cement, which is spread on the felt.

Tiling a Kitchen.

Question: I have several questions I would like to have your advice on. One: Do you advocate tile extending to the ceiling behind the stove? Would the heat from the stove crack the tile? Two: What materials and method of placing the tile should be used to insure its not becoming loose after a time? Do you recommend the use of straight Portland cement? Three: Are there various grades of tile?

Answer: It is not necessary to tile the wall to the ceiling. If the oven of the stove is not insulated, the stove should be moved far enough away from the wall to eliminate the risk of fire. Nowadays, most ovens are insulated. Two: To describe in detail the method and materials used for tile setting would take too much space in this column. Write to the Tile Manufacturers Association at 19 West 44th Street, New York city, and ask for the pamphlet that they issue, covering this question. The pamphlet also describes the various grades of tile. It will be sent without charge.

Lining a Basement.

Question: In making a basement into a clubroom, is it practical to use wallboard for the walls? Can the floor be painted?

Answer: The wallboard that is like thick pasteboard will swell and shrink with changes in weather, and is not practical. You will do better to use a kind of insulating board that has a treatment making it resistant to dampness; get it at a lumber yard. Ordinary paint will not last on a concrete floor, because of the destruction of the oils by the lime in the cement. At a large paint store you should be able to get a dye for coloring the floor, or possibly a cement paint, intended for that special job.

Concrete on Brick.

Question: We want to cover a brick paved court with concrete. What mixture should we use?

Answer: If the brick are laid directly on the ground, there is every chance that heaving, as the ground freezes and thaws, will crack the concrete. This is not so likely to happen if the brick are laid on a foundation of eight inches of packed cinders—not ashes—or are on a concrete bed. If this is not the case, there is likely to be trouble. If you want to go ahead, use a mixture of 1 part cement, 2 1/4 parts building sand, and 5 parts finely crushed rock or small pebbles, with only enough water to make a workable mixture. Spaces between the bricks should be cleaned out to a depth of an inch or more, to permit the concrete to penetrate, and at the time of pouring, the bricks should be well soaked with water.

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I have made a pair of spool shelves like those you give directions for in your Sewing Book No. 3. They are painted watermelon pink to match the flowers in my bedroom curtains, and they are very pretty hung at each side of the windows. I would like to make some end tables of spools for the living room, but I can't think of a way to make them rigid. Have you any suggestions as to how this may be done? B. P."

Curtain rods are used through the spools to make the legs. Better take along a spool to try when you shop for the rods; and get the type that has one piece fitting inside the other. If the spools are a little loose on the rod, it won't make any difference for they must be glued between each spool, and also between the spools and the table shelves.

NOTE: If you have an iron bed or a rocking chair you would like to modernize, be sure to send for my Book No. 3. It contains 32 fascinating ideas of things to make for your home. Send your order to:

ATTACK ON AMERICA

BY GENERAL
ALFRED WHITE
VE 10 U. S. 200000

INSTALLMENT II

Bromlitz, stretched out face downward on a cot, raised his face as the steel door opened on the little hole to which he was confined. His alert, heavy black eyes searched the face of his visitor, and he sat up as recognition came to his face.

"Hello, Benning," he said, his face unaccountably brightening. "So it's you come after me, eh? Well, I'm glad. If I must be hanged, that it's to be an American job."

"Merely a little visit, Bromlitz," Benning answered. "I'm not to take you home, but you'll understand my confession of gratification that you've been run down at last. Corporal Hill, the man you killed, was a member of my company."

They engaged in a strained conversation. Benning prolonged his visit while he studied Bromlitz for his own purposes. He asked many questions of the Bromlitz stay in Luxembourg, which the prisoner answered freely. He was sharply puzzled by the evident good humor that his visit had brought to the fellow. But Bromlitz' parting words cleared up that enigma.

"May I ask you a special favor, Benning?" Bromlitz asked as Benning rose to go.

The prisoner was suddenly solemn, there was a pleading note in his voice, a beseeching look in his black eyes.

"I owe you no favors, Bromlitz," Benning said brusquely.

"A very little favor to a man who must die," the other implored. "Let me tell you, Benning, and you needn't say no. Your coming here has greatly relieved my mind. I was suspicious that I must have been betrayed to the French, but now I know it was the American secret service that caught up with me. A small distinction you say? But an important one to me. The one fine thing in my life has been, Benning, a girl, whom I hoped soon to marry. Please will you take a message to her at Luxembourg? Tell her I was killed by a train, drowned. Tell her anything but the truth. She must think me dead. Out of her loyalty she might wait for me through empty years, and she's too fine for that ordeal. Please let her think I'm honorably dead and can't ever return. You'll do that for me, please, Benning?"

THE STORY SO FAR: Colonel Flagwill, acting assistant chief of staff G-2, in charge of military intelligence, estimated from secret information that there were 200,000 European troops in Mexico being prepared for an attack on the United States. Both he and the President were powerless to act because of public

CHAPTER III

A tramcar took Benning from the Colonia Station in Mexico City to Plaza Mayor, whence he crossed the broad Mexican thoroughfare to the great stone bulk of the Palacio Nacional. He ascended a gendarme and asked directions to General Van Hassek's headquarters.

The policeman shook a puzzled head and answered, "I've heard of no such general in Mexico, señor."

"Perhaps," Benning suggested, "you can direct me to General Ruiz?"

The Mexican's face lighted up, and he spoke almost in awe, "Oh, señor, if your credentials are important enough you may find General Ruiz in the President's suite at the palace."

Benning smiled inwardly as he turned to the Porto Mariano and entered the palace. Many times since arriving at Vera Cruz he had inquired about Van Hassek to find the name unknown. It meant that Van Hassek, a real master of the Mexican forces, was entrenched behind a stout incognito, moving his pawns in the game of young Ruiz, the new dictator who had been placed in power by a swift, furious, and mysterious coup d'état of European planning.

An elevator shot Benning to the fourth floor. He presented his credentials to a staff officer with easy assurance. So far, his carte d'identité had passed him without question. The staff officer directed him down a tiled corridor that rang with the clatter of military typewriters and all the hum and buzz of a general headquarters.

He was escorted into a large reception room of the far end of the palace. The staff officer got to his feet grudgingly.

"I'll see if Excellency wishes you to report to him personally," he said in German. He left the room, but was back in a few moments to say, "General Van Hassek will see you at once, Major."

Benning found himself in an immense chamber whose rich furnishings ran a riot of wood and gold. He entered a room where a large map of the United States was spread out on the wall. He saw a man in a military uniform sitting at a desk, looking at a map.

Van Hassek, the man in the military uniform, looked up at Benning. He was a man of middle age, with a serious expression. He asked Benning for his name and rank. Benning answered that he was a Major in the U.S. Army.

Van Hassek asked Benning if he was a member of the U.S. Army. Benning answered that he was.

Van Hassek asked Benning if he was a member of the U.S. Army. Benning answered that he was.

and congressional opinion which failed to realize the significance of the troops. In an effort to obtain more definite proof, Colonel Flagwill sent Captain Benning, daring American intelligence officer, to the U. S. ambassador in Paris. Here he was told to impersonate Lieutenant Bromlitz, a former American officer who ly plain uniform were a glittering order of merit at his left breast and, under it, the Iron cross.

Some moments passed in which the only sound was the heavy ticking of an immense German clock and the vague hum of traffic in the street below.

"Perhaps you can tell me, Bromlitz," Van Hassek mused without change of voice or posture. "Yes, perhaps you can tell me."

A faint smile passed his thick lips as he went on: "I've just come up from the Salon de Espera on a lower floor of the palace where I've installed a hospital. Perhaps I should refer to it as my laboratory. In any event, no one ever leaves it alive, but they are only spies and traitors who must die by one means or another. For some months I've been watching them at the moment they leave the world, yet I'm more mystified now than ever. Do you tell me, Bromlitz, if you can, is death the end of us?"

"Sit down, Bromlitz."

"Your pardon, Excellency," Benning answered. "I'm not a chaplain."

"The other chuckled and with a violent shake of his head that was not that of an ordinary man."

The production of arms to go east and retreats, Bromlitz, I've given up all hope of mastering it in detail. Van Hassek rejoined. "Benning, I had a personal discussion in your line of thought. So many, many people are dead of cancer, and I'm sure that many of them that I've seen dying, surely regret which of them will be the end of them."

"You mean that many will die in war, I take it, sir," Benning answered.

"Indeed," Van Hassek answered, "that is my opinion."

He pulled a chair up to the desk and sat down. He looked at Benning and he seemed to be in a deep thought.

"You were, I understood, an American army officer," Van Hassek said, had planned to work with the foreign agents in Mexico. Expelled from the U. S. Army, he had desired to get revenge for the "insult." Fortunately, Bromlitz had been captured, so Benning prepared to visit him in his cell to study his mannerisms.

Now continue with the story.

Benning spoke briskly in German. "I'm told there are serious charges standing against you in the United States."

"Benning said: 'I hope you'll not judge me by that, General Van Hassek. Despite my past misfortunes I'm a soldier, sir, and hold the view that there is no other profession worthy of a man. That being so, when circumstances beyond my control placed a price on my head in one country, haven't I the right to find service in another?'"

"Ja, a soldier is always a soldier, Bromlitz," Van Hassek answered with an approving nod. "I enjoyed my three years in China as much as my station in Vienna; and Mexico is even more to my liking because there are big events shaping up. Tell me in your own way, Bromlitz, what you think of the American army's fighting capacity."

Benning pondered briefly and decided upon the full and unequivocal truth which, after all, could only confirm what Van Hassek must already know.

"If you mean the American readiness for a sudden war, that is nothing short of pitiable, sir. The United States land forces are scattered in small garrisons, are not properly equipped, and have very little training in the team-play of the larger combat elements."

"What do you know of its strength?"

"There are four army infantry divisions and eighteen National Guard infantry divisions together with some four cavalry divisions. All are at peace strength and it would take months to put them on a war footing, fully equipped. In total manpower count on 300,000 men within the territorial limits."

"Ja, very good. What about their fighting equipment?"

"Pitiable, when you consider the whole picture. Their artillery is largely World War vintage stuff. They're short on ammunition, anti-aircraft, instruments of precision, modern rifles. Their anti-tank weapons aren't out of the factories yet. It would take them a year to make the weapons they need. If they couldn't purchase them in foreign markets as they did for the World War, they have a high class of poor equipment, thoroughly trained and so."

"Ja, I know of that," Van Hassek interrupted with a dash of impatience. "But at these modern equipment and plenty of training to fight a battle here and there. Now, tell me another thing, Bromlitz, would the mass of Americans stick together in case of emergency?"

Benning chuckled briefly and answered. "I'm sure you can count on that they will, sir."

"But what if they were overcome suddenly? How long would they stand up under a modern military punishment when they had their chance offered them to to buy their way back to peace?"

"Fortunately, it is probable that anyone would be sufficient enough to attack the United States on her own soil," Benning asked. "I mean when her potential resources in wealth and manpower are taken into consideration?"

Van Hassek snapped out, "That's precisely why she must be attacked on her own soil, because of her latent strength."

Benning pretended perplexity and countered, "I'm not sure I understand just what Excellency means."

"I mean it was America's stupid intervention that wrecked the world in the Great War."

"But didn't her strength turn the balance in the last war, Excellency?"

"Strength, bah!" Van Hassek scoffed. "Not for more than a year after the United States jumped into the war did her soldiers fire a shot in battle. Then only after the French supplied her with cannon, the British with rifles, helmets, and gas masks, and both sides conducted a military kindergarten to instruct her divisions in the art of war. Ja, that was her latent strength!"

Van Hassek got up abruptly and with an amazing agility. He went to his desk and touched a call button. The captain from the anteroom responded promptly.

"Captain Schreff," Van Hassek instructed, "I'm very well satisfied with Bromlitz. You may have him report for the time being to Colonel Bravot. Later I may have more important use for him."

CHAPTER IV

Benning found himself assigned to a stuffy little room that was piled high with American newspapers and magazines. Half a dozen other officers were engaged in reading these publications.

Each day this group was required to make a summary of American press opinion as affecting Mexican relations. Outwardly a peaceful enough job, but one that Benning knew to be a vital part of Van Hassek's war machinery.

During the next few days Benning kept pretty much to himself, though cautiously making friends with the Austrian, Captain Fincke, who sat at his elbow. A bit at a time he meant to gather the information he had come for. If long risks had to be taken in order to secure important secret informations, that would have to wait until he had the lay of things at headquarters.

Mexico City, Benning observed in his off-duty strolls, was serene and untroubled.

Mexican troops themselves had undergone a transition. They had shies on their feet and discipline in their ranks and were used largely as labor troops. Except for patrols and a daily guard-mounting there was no daily martial display in the city.

Ruiz, holding the military rank of colonel general, was an imposing figure, erect, lean, dashing. His uniform was always vivid and he was forever attended by heavily uniformed aides and orderlies. Benning thought Ruiz must have been packed for appearance as well as his susceptibility to control, in order to put on a show that would catch and hold the Mexican imagination.

Widd B. Twaddle
vs.
Heirs of Dearborn L. Austin and Heirs of Robert A. Chapman and Assignees.

Widd B. Twaddle of Bethel, in the County of Oxford and State of Maine complains against the heirs of Dearborn L. Austin and his assignees and the heirs of Robert A. Chapman, formerly of said Bethel and his assignees and says:

1. He is the owner in fee simple of a certain lot or parcel of land situated and located in the town of Gilead in said County, bounded and described as follows:

It being about sixty acres of pasture land, or what was pasture land in said Gilead lying on the southerly side of the highway leading from the town of Bethel to said Gilead and westerly of road leading to the house now or formerly of George W. Mills in said Gilead and land of said George W. Mills and land now or formerly of Caleb Goodnow, bounded on the south by land now or formerly of Henry Goodnow, and on the west by land now or formerly of Lyssander Ordway and Moses Mason and on the north by said highway, Being the same lot of land described in the second description in deed of Ralph W. Bean to John A. Twaddle dated October 14, 1913 and recorded in Oxford County Registry of Deeds Book 326 page 415, and by deed of Carlotta A. Green to John M. Bean by her warranty deed dated February 15, 1873, recorded in said Registry Book 187, Page 207.

The said John A. Twaddle was in possession of said lot from the time of said purchase in 1913 until his death January 23, 1918 and your complainant inherited said lot and has been in possession ever since.

2. The complainant desires to sell and dispose of said lot and has a purchaser for same, but examining the title finds there is an undischarged mortgage on record of said lot given by John M. Bean to Dearborn L. Austin, dated February 27, 1873 and recorded in said Registry Book 155, Page 562, and another mortgage given by Mary C. Bean, widow of the said John M. Bean, to Robert A. Chapman, dated May 25, 1877, and recorded in said Registry Book 177, Page 342 with no discharge on record.

3. The said John M. Bean continued in possession of said premises until his death some time prior to 1877, and his widow continued in possession under her own right and by purchase from the administrator of the estate of said John M. Bean by deed dated May 12, 1877 and recorded in said Registry Book 175, Page 446, until her death, since then the heirs of the said Mary C. Bean have been seized in fee of said premises until conveyed to the said John A. Twaddle.

4. Your complainant is familiar with the history of the parties involved in the aforementioned transactions and avers that both of said mortgages have been paid and discharged, but not of record.

5. Your complainant further says that the existence of said undischarged mortgages constitutes a cloud on said title and seriously affects the market value of said lot.

6. Your complainant further says that said Robert A. Chapman and Dearborn L. Austin are deceased and their heirs are unknown to your complainant and cannot be ascertained by reasonable diligence.

Wherefore prays that said mortgages be discharged of record, and that complainant may have such further and other relief as the nature of the case may require.

And may it please this Honorable Court to issue its subpoena to the said heirs or their assignees, commanding them to appear before this Court and answer to this bill of complaint at the April Rules following and abide the orders of Court thereon.

The farm-mortgage debt in the United States at the beginning of 1940 is estimated at $6,910,000,000, the smallest amount at any time since 1910 and about 64 percent of the peak amount outstanding on January 1, 1925. The farm-mortgage debt in Maine on January 1, 1940, was an estimated $30,427,000 compared with $30,907,000 on January 1, 1930. States showing the greatest percentage increase in farm-mortgage indebtedness during 1939 were Mississippi, Nevada, Connecticut, Vermont, and New Hampshire. Decreases were reported in 37 states, with the most marked declines in the West North Central States.

ABNORMAL
A motorist had been hailed into court, and when his name was called the judge asked what the charges were against the prisoner. "Suspicious actions, Your Honor," answered the policeman who made the arrest.

"Suspicious actions?" queried the judge. "What was he doing that seemed suspicious?"
"Well," replied the officer, "he was running within the speed limit, counting his horn properly, keeping on the right side of the street and not trying to beat any of the stop lights so, naturally, I arrested him."
